ABOUT US

I've been involved with the Homeless World Cup since I was the England captain back in 2003. But it was a chance conversation with one of my mates – who doesn't like football one bit – that led to us launching the Homeless Games.

There are huge benefits for each and every homeless person who takes part. A chance to improve their health, both physical and mental. Developing their confidence and pride. Helping them to find new pathways, gaining new skills and accessing much-needed support.

Since 2010, we've hosted the two-day annual Homeless Games in Liverpool, providing 'Olympic style' games for people who are or have experienced homelessness in last two years with participants coming from across the UK to take part.

There are lots of ways a company like yours can get involved, and a make huge difference to the lives of some of the most vulnerable people in our communities:

Sponsoring one of the sports held during the two-day Homeless Games. From five-a-side football to track and field, cycling to swimming and even board games, there's something to suit everyone.

Providing goods and services in-kind. The Games need sport equipment, catering, and admin support, and the event is an opportunity for homeless people to access health, inclusion and education services.

Giving your time as a volunteer, steward or supporter.

ERIC HOUGHTON
